

Exterior Solar Shade Benefits

- Reduced Energy Cost
- Light Control
- Interior Space Saver
- Privacy

Exterior Solar Shades allow daylight in while keeping the harmful UV rays from discoloring your carpet or furniture. They also will block the daytime view from your neighbor while allowing you to see and enjoy the view out your window. All this while keeping the interior of your window free for other covering options.

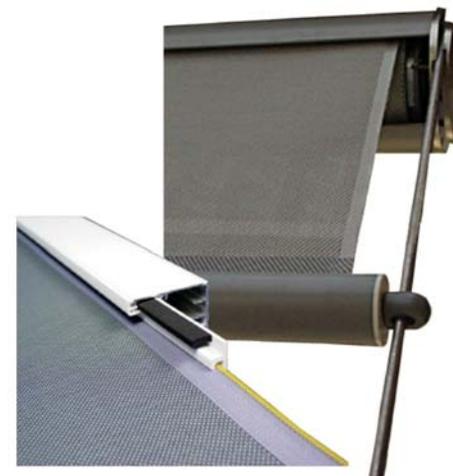

Exterior Solar Shades have been the choice for homes and businesses for many years... in Europe. The reasoning is clear; stop the sun's harmful rays before they enter your living space, not afterwards. Doing this, cuts the energy cost even more than if the shades were inside. It also leaves more options when decorating the interior portion of your window. With today's technology, this is easily done and becomes a very reliable option, fully motorized, that opens or closes with just the push of a button. The fabric options are wide and range from 15% openness to complete blackout vinyl.

How Do Exterior Solar Shades Work?

The Exterior Solar Shade consists of a selection of sturdy, exterior grade fabric that rolls up on a special tube and is protected by a closed aluminum box. When needed, it is lowered, usually by a motor, and is pulled down by a weighted bottomrail. The systems that hold the shade in place when lowered can be either a strong cable that runs the length of the shade and is attached to the bottomrail only or the more secure track system that holds the fabric in place the entire length of the shade. Red Oaks Shutter offers both systems with the option of a hurricane grade screen material, (that has a 10 year warranty) for the track system.

(This is not a hurricane product)

Exterior Solar Shades can cover a variety of openings: standard windows and doors, inclosing your front porch, balcony or backyard patio. They also can be built into new construction or renovations.
